Renewable Energy

The stimulus and energy proposals soon to be crafted by the new Administration and Congress must include more support for all elements of renewable energy, including wind, solar, biofuels and most importantly biomass for heat and power in rural American industries. This will quickly create thousands of new non exportable green jobs and revitalize rural America and the thousands of small companies based there. It is critical that the cost of creating this jump start to the economic wellbeing and energy security of America not be born from cuts to the complex and fragile safety net that now provide minimal protection for America's family farmers.
